Excerpts: "This TIME....as Africans, we must acknowledge that though we appear to be relatively at peace, we are actually engaged in a subtle but deadly war. We are in a war against a great many of the norms we have allowed to pass for too long. We are at war against the limitations posed by infrastructural deficiencies and retrogressive policies. We are at war with HIV, Malaria and Infant Mortality. We are at war with shortage of water and food. We are at war against prejudices and paradigms, comfort, convenience, and the status quo. We are at war with selfishness and greed. We are at war with our thinking. We are at war with our history. We are at war with ourselves. Actually, we are angry!"*

About Olakunle Soriyan? I rather not rob you by telling you what I think I know about him. Find out for yourself.
